First published more than fifteen years ago, Knock at a Star was a collection of poems that children would like rather than a collection of work that they should like. Now X.J. and Dorothy Kennedy have added new poems by such gifted writers as Jack Prelutsky, Barbara Esbensen, Mary Ann Hoberman and Judith Viorst as well as cutting several poems that no longer seem as fresh as they once did.

Knock at a Star by X. J. and Dorothy M. Kennedy is a fresh, inspired compilation of children's poetry that introduces and challenges its readers. Most poems in the book are unique and essential to include, but a few could be left out or better explained. While "Canis Major" by Robert Frost is creative, clear, and inspirational, "Poor" by Myra Cohn Livingston sends a message to the ...
