Rosas Gold

Rosa's Gold is a remarkable story about John MacDonald, a British soldier who spends time as a POW in Italy and Germany that takes place between 1940-2000s. I loved the format of the story that flips between chapters to tell "Nicole's" story, Rosa's, Lorenzo's, and Mac's experiences in Auschwitz in explicit detail.

Rose gold is made by combining specific amounts of silver, copper, and gold into one combined substance. When you refer to a karat number, that refers to the "parts" of gold within that piece. So 24 karat gold would be 100% gold. 18 karat gold, as we mentioned earlier, would be 75% gold, or 18 parts gold and 6 parts alloy.

I'm afraid to say that Rosa's Gold by Ray Kingfisher fits into the latter category. I first read The Sugar Men by and found this to be a good read capturing the plight of a young Jewish woman incarcerated in a concentration camp. The characters were portrayed well and the plot moved along to it's conclusion.
